This is the Genealogy of WILLIAM McCORMICK, a Soldier in the American Revolution. He served as a Private in the Sixth Company, Second Class of Seventh Battalion of Cumberland County (Pennsylvania) Militia under Colonel James Purdy, March 1782. His military record is filed in Volume 98 of the Revolutionary Pension Records of the United States.

WILLIAM was born in Cross County, Londonderry, Ireland, on Sept. 18, 1732, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Carruth) McCormick. He and his older brothers, Thomas and James, emigrated to Pennsylvania with their parents in 1735 where they first settled in the country east of the Susquehanna River. After an interval of years, Thomas, Sr. removed to what is now Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, on the west or right bank of the river. Here the family resided on a good-sized farm which still remains in the ownership of the Harrisburg branch of the McCormick family, descendants of Thomas Sr.'s second son, James.

About 1755, WILLIAM, with his younger brothers, Hugh and Robert, both born in Pennsylvania, and their families moved northwest to Juniata County and resided there until 1770. At that time WILLIAM moved across the river to Milford Township, and he and his family remained there until 1803 when, having disposed of his land, he made a further move to Fairfield County, Ohio, the place of his death in 1812.

The compilers of this Genealogy are grateful to the many McCormick relatives who have generously contributed much of the data concerning later generations.

For the history of the Irish Ancestors of WILLIAM McCORMICK we are indebted to information contained in the book "FAMILY RECORD AND BIOGRAPHY" by Leander J. McCormick of Chicago, published in 1896; and another by his grandson, Leander McCormick-Goodhart of Hyattsville, Maryland, published in 1934, entitled "DESCENDANTS OF ROBERT McCORMICK". While these books are written about their ancestor, ROBERT McCORMICK, all data applies as well to his brothers and sister, Thomas, James, William, Hugh and Elizabeth, all children of THOMAS,Sr. McCORMICK, our first immigrant ancestor.

From Mr. Goodhart's book we quote the following concerning the Irish ancestors of WILLIAM McCORMICK:

> "In spite of the considerable amount of effort which has been expended in tracing the ancestors of Robert McCormick prior to Captain James McCormick of Londonderry fame, it is not possible to choose satisfactorily between the two lineages so far evolved by investigators. The one asserts that Robert's ancestors descended from remote Irish stock allied with the illustrious King Cormac (and so "MacCormac") who died in A.D. 260 and, more particularly from one Donogh MacCormac who lived at the beginning of the fifteenth century; the other that they migrated to Ulster at some period or other from Scotland. This period is sometimes said to have been the years following the flight from Ireland of the Earls of Tyrone and Tyrconnell in 1607, upon which James I of England inaugurated the so-called "Plantation of Ulster" by Scottish Colonists. It appears, however, to be established at least that Capt. James' father was Thomas McCormick, born in 1610, and that Thomas' father was Hugh McCormick, born in 1570. But the Irish descent from further generations back, as at present worked out, involves the use of variant "MacCormac" and the customary use of essentially Irish baptismal names such as Donogh, Reagh, and Manus instead of such essentially Scotch names as Andrew and Ellin (two other children of Hugh) and of Anglo-Saxon names such as Richard, James and Thomas. On the other hand, if James' grandfather was Hugh, born in 1570 in Ireland, the family existed there forty years before the "Plantation of Ulster" and if Scottish, must have migrated thither some time before that event. In view of the many unhappy troubles in Scotland, this might easily have happened. It is certain that there was a large Scottish settlement in the middle of the sixteenth century in ANTRIM where Hugh McCormick, born in 1570, resided at a place with a Scottish name, DUNMAKELTER. The form of the name itself, McCormick, savours more of Scottish origin than Irish, but, again, a recently extinct Irish title of MacCormac carried the McCormick motto: "SINE TIMORE", thus pointing to a common Irish origin. The subject seems to require further study. So far as the McCormicks of Scotland are concerned, we know they were and still, presumably, are, a "sept", i.e. a division or subordinate branch of the Clan MACLAINE of LOCHBUIE.

"Whatever the truth regarding the descent of the family prior to Captain James McCormick, one of the Ulster folk among the many who emigrated to America in the middle decades of the eighteenth century and settled to a large extent in Pennsylvania in the country of the Susquehanna river, was THOMAS McCORMICK, son of the aforementioned Captain James.

"THOMAS crossed the Atlantic at the same time as his elder brother, HUGH. The two brothers at first settled in the country east of the Susquehanna. After an interval of years, THOMAS removed to what is now Cumberland County on the west or right bank of the river. Here THOMAS and his wife (Elizabeth Carruth) resided on a good-sized farm which still remains in the ownership of the Harrisburg branch of the McCormick family, descendants of THOMAS McCORMICK'S second son, James.

"THOMAS' fifth son was Robert the elder, born in America in 1738. On reaching middle-age, Robert Sr. with his next eldest brothers, William and Hugh, moved northwest to Juniata County, Pennsylvania, and resided there until 1779, when he, Robert Sr., sold his own property and took his wife, Martha (Sanderson) McCormick and family down the Shenandoah Valley to the borders of Rockbridge County, Virginia, where he purchased a plantation of 450 acres and called it "WALNUT GROVE". Here his youngest son, Robert Jr. was born on June 8, 1780. The mother, Martha, died in 1807, and on February 11, 1808, Robert Jr. married Mary Ann Hall. Robert Jr. and his bride went to live with his father in the log house at "Walnut Grove". In 1810 ownership of the estate, now amounting to 532 acres, was transferred by sale from father to son, and Robert Sr. died there in 1818. In 1822, Robert Jr. and his family moved into a spacious new brick residence which he had built to meet his growing needs, and this building still stands."

The Robert Jr.,(born 1780) referred to by Mr. Goodhart, was an inventor, but it remained for his son, Cyrus, to become famous. Cyrus Hall McCormick, American inventor and manufacturer, was born in Virginia in 1809 and died in Chicago on May 13, 1884. He removed from his native State to Cincinnati in 1845 and two years later went to Chicago. In 1831 he invented an improved Reaping-Machine which was patented and further improved, and which brought him great wealth and world-wide fame, with many decorations and medals.
